The American GARDENER

is the magazine of the American Horticultural Society (AHS), one of the oldest non-profit gardening organizations in the United States. The AHS is a national membership organization that advocates and supports successful and earth-friendly gardening through its educational programs and publications. Each issue covers a wide range of gardening topics such as plant profiles, how-tos, design tips, hot trends, and interviews with prominent gardening personalities.

Published six times per year, The American Gardener reaches more than 22,000 paid subscribers including AHS members, professional horticulturists, Master Gardeners, public gardens, and public/educational libraries. There is also bonus distribution at major horticultural events such as flower shows, trade shows, symposia, and conferences throughout the country.

When you advertise in The American Gardener, you reach more than 22,000 avid gardeners.
